An OUR LADY OF ENCHANTMENT PUBLICATION

ISSUE 88-1 OUR LADY OF ENCHANTMENT, BOX 1366, NASHUA, NH 03061 WHOLE NO. 47
CHURCH OF THE OLD RELIGION AND SCHOOL OF WICCA NON-PROFIT ORGANIZATION

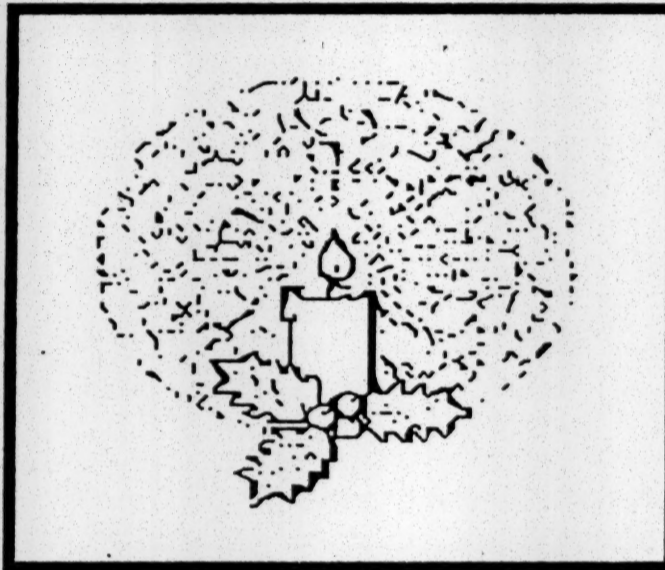

Greetings to all in this New Year of 1988. Yes, the Newsletter is only about three months late due to many factors. First of all the installation of new IBM equipment took its toll; as we were all used to word processing and had not the faintest of what was involved with computers.

This has been an experience not only the getting used to different equipment but just the language of the computer is so different from that of plain word processors. It will be exciting to see what new and different ideas can be brought forth with the help of modern technology.

Then there was the usual-sudden interest in any and everything that had to do with Witchcraft during the Samhain season. As can be expected Halloween is a busy time here at the Center only this year it did not calm down afterwards. Lady Sabrina appeared on the "Geraldo" show with Selena Fox, Marion Weinstein and Don Frew; and just about as soon as her plane landed the camera crew from channel 50 was here to do a special Halloween News Break, which was great as it was five minutes long and showed three times on the eve of Samhain. This along with more than two dozen radio shows from coast to coast did in deed keep her busy. Not to mention the rest of us with the increased student enrollment rate.

Not to stop there Sabrina did two very successful workshops; one at Pyramid Books in Salem, MA and the other one here at the Center. As the year progresses we do hope to present more seminars, workshops and other magical activities beyond what is now being offered. We have also added a smaller separate classroom on the second floor and opened up the student quarters so we can accommodate our growing numbers.

There have been some changes in the Priesthood training program breaking it down into three levels. Level one is for one week and covers the basic concepts of the first degree or year of Priesthood. The second level is for two weeks and expands on the responsibilities of those entering the Priesthood along with group management. The third and final phase of this training program is for three weeks and involves the psychological aspects of running a coven and starting a Wiccan Church. As most of you know we are a legally recognized Church, School and non-profit organization. We are therefore able to sponsor other Churches, issue ministerial credentials and help with the establishment of other organizations such as ours. In the very near future we will be putting together a complete Church package for those wishing recognition in this area.

THE ZODIAC: THE DRAMA OF LIFE

Phoenix

The Zodiac is the foundation of all Astrological interpretation. But what is the Zodiac? How does one use it in a reading?

Contrary to what most people believe the Zodiac is not a set of constellations in space. It is an imaginary belt which encircles the Earth. This belt is the path which the Sun appears to follow annually through the sky. Astrologers have divided this belt into twelve signs, which together describe the entire cycle of life.

The birth chart can be seen as portraying a drama which represents the life of the person who is getting the reading. The planets are the actors. They are strong, forceful characters with distinctive personalities which shine through no matter where they may be placed. The Zodiac, however, forms the backdrop upon which the play is performed. Each sign can be seen as a stage with it's own props and scenes. They each embody a principle, having a specific meaning and ruling a range of behavior, events and physical objects. The sign in which a planet is placed modifies how that planet expresses itself and in what areas of the person's life it's effects will be felt the strongest. Just as an actor will act differently when performing in differing scenes so to will a planet function differently when in different signs.

Aries is the first sign of the Zodiac, as such it is firey and dynamic, initiating new projects aggressively, yet seldom following these through to completion. Taurus, on the other hand is conservative and fixed, steadily ploding along in order to maintain security. Lets take a look at how Mars would react in each of these signs. Mars is an assertive, forceful and highly impulsive character. This planet represents action and power. The sign in which it is placed shows how the person expresses these qualities. Mars feels quite at home in Aries as their characteristics are very similar. Mars placed here would make for an energetic, assertive person who is likely to be a leader in their chosen field. However, they will be impulsive, impatient and possess a quick temper. In Taurus the forcefulness of Mars becomes much more stable and consistent. These people would be practical, yet obstinate and not very good at adapting to new circumstances.

By looking at the horoscope as a drama filled with characters and colorful stage sets one is able to see just how easy Astrology can be. The key is to know your actors and the various stages which they will be performing on.

ONLY STILLNESS

BY Donna Lyon Rhose

The thin-speckled lines of color
form the images of trees,
bark and falling leaves - ground and sky move in between like studies, shadowy dancers.

All is quiet in the cold, frozen aires,
but for the winds raspy voice.
There are no churrips now.
A great aloneness descends.

Though the sun is high and bright,
His warmth does not penetrate
but for a momentary glancing;
only stillness answers Him.

Only quiet, only stillness,
Only the crackling coldness
No hint of the summers wonder.
I can only hope she'll return,
I can only hope Spring does indeed
Follow after Winter.

WINTERSEARCH

BY Cassius

They move within the winter mists,
Spectres of a forgotten time,
Their knowledge deep the Wise do seek,
and so they follow, line by line.

Within the frosts, in places none do
walk abroad - They dewll,
In shadowed stillness, from what lost
ages none may tell,

Their voices whisper, softly, to the places bare,
The Wise ones only hear, no others
venture there.

For Knowledge waits for all, in places
that are both known and that are lost,

And very few are wont to learn, when bitter effort is great Wisdoms cost.

Why Are There Secret Mysteries?

In Wicca, we are introduced to the natural mysteries - birth, growth, death, rebirth; night and darkness, God and Goddess. At one time, the men and women who held this knowledge were the scientists and leaders of their communities: they were the "technicians of the sacred." The cycles of Nature, the uses of herb, the healing charms, and the voices of the gods and the goddesses - these were crucial to the running of life, and it was rare knowledge. Nowadays, we live in a divided existence, between the natural world and the world of our own making. In Wicca, we gain an awareness of the elements of this world and the next, and discover our true relationship to them. While this knowledge isn't always as crucial to our survival as it once was, it still enriches our lives beyond measure. The mysteries of Life and Death are eternal, and while they seem to change, they never leave us. Still, how do we respond to them in their new forms?

Sorcery: High-Tech Witchcraft

Magick is the specialized training in the use of the forces behind the elements. Where Wicca employs the magick of natural forces, sorcery distills these elements into pure essences. These essences may occasionally differ, depending on the particular magickal tradition, but at the core of the teachings they deal with the same forces.

There is an intensity of focused purpose in magick that is sharper than the natural magick of Wicca, and so its practical aspects are also more emphasized. An interesting aspect of magickal systems is how they each have their own very definite cultural flavor. The nature religion of Wicca has a universal appeal; after all, despite differences in location and climate, Nature has similar cycles everywhere. Each culture, however, has a unique viewpoint, and we all have our roots in one or two specific cultures. Rather than being a trap, the magick of our cultures can be a springboard to launch us into new areas of peace, power and purpose. Like the computer, magick can be a general-purpose tool for increasing our knowledge and effectiveness, here and now.

Universal occult principles. Creative visualization and ESP. The use of advanced rituals for practical applications. Secrets...

Perhaps it's time to ask yourself if you're ready to continue on to the Magick of Sorcery course. The pioneers of science had their training in these systems. Why not discover the techniques that have survived for over three thousand years? Why not learn to use the Magick of Sorcery?

DOING THE WORK

By Linda J. (546G)

Many of those seeking occult power and knowledge seem to those with more experience to want it all "handed to them on a plate". This applies to other situations, too. Many expect a handsome millionaire to ride up and transport them to a life of idle luxury without a care in the world. In both cases, there is something very important which the aspirant should be doing meanwhile: namely, preparing themselves to be exactly what is required by a good occult teacher or millionaire, respectively.

Millionaires are impressed by women who will be an asset in their lives outside the bedroom - someone with business skills, initiative, a good hostess or Secretary, for example. Likewise, occult teachers love a pupil who can already do an effective ritual or divination system or contact sensible entities on the Inner Planes, etc.

To acquire any of the above skills, it is not sufficient to be born with a natural talent (because Granny was a hereditary Witch/Psychic/Faith-Healer etc). You have to do the work required to develop yourself, so that you have something of your own to contribute; and no one else can do it for you. It is a form of enlightened selfishness, really, as opposed to "dim selfishness" which takes no account of the desires of others.

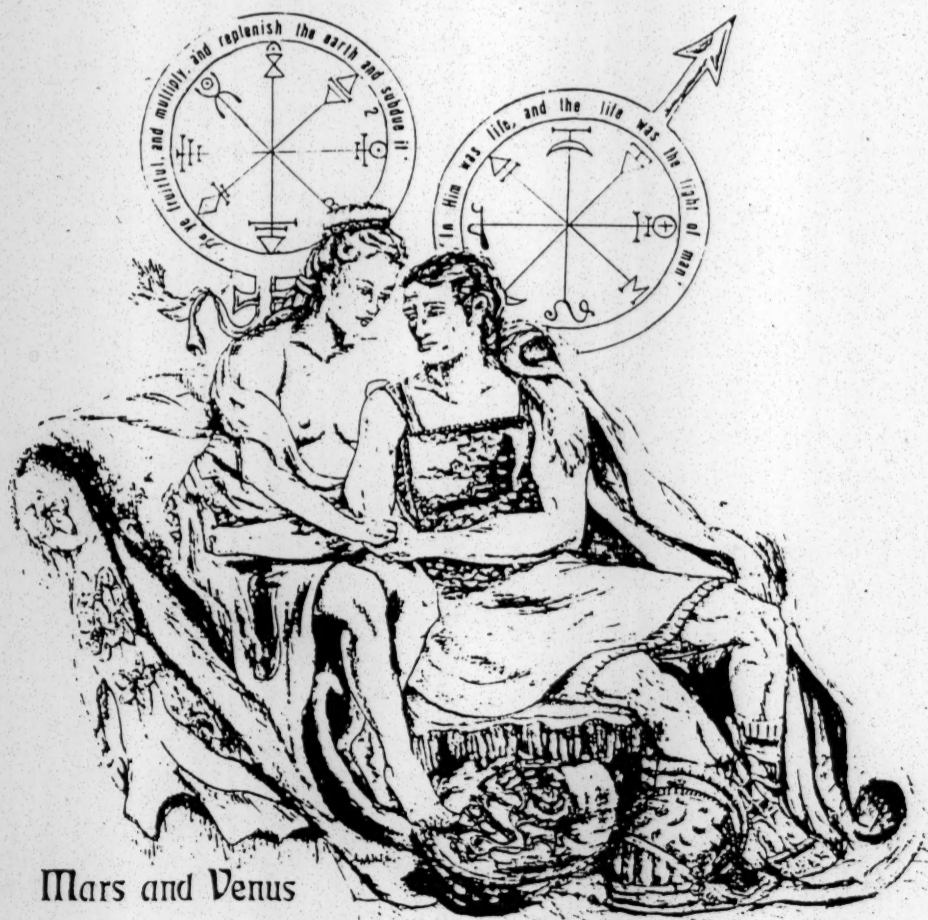

You might be surprised how many applicants to occult groups display the warning signs of "dim selfishness". They become terribly excited about doing magical rituals, learning the great "secrets" (especially the sort that can be published) and meeting attractive nubile witches, but draw back in horror at the prospect of rolling up their shirt-sleeves and actually (gasp!) working! Any decent group would throw out these useless glamourised specimens in double-quick time, so they gravitate to their lowest common denominator (often a purported "discussion group" which is really a weak excuse for a booze-up, as if any were needed!)

To impress other people generally, you need to have devoted time and effort to some worthwhile task. It doesn't have to be the Duke of Edinburgh's Award Scheme (although that will do very well). If successful at the project, you have proved your determination, concentration, single-mindedness and you will then have some sort of skill or special knowledge to offer. You then already possess the essential keys to the much-vaunted "occult power". Incidentally, a good occult group will incorporate numerous projects, ordeals, workings etc. in its curriculum to train those who need to develop or display these qualities and deter those who will never make the grade (through their own choice).

So, having taken all of the "easy fun" out of Magic, why do it? The answer is that all the steady groundwork, which is like cultivating the wild field of your soul and turning it into a Garden, will one day bring you something of inestimable value. It will probably happen in a very personal way which is infuriatingly hard to communicate to others. This is the real "secret" of Magic; the one that can never be made known. Actually, it happens in many kinds of mysticism, so one can get the "feel" of it and recognise it when it happens.

For the sake of argument, we can call it "illumination" because it involves seeing your situation far more clearly than before when illusions hid much of the truth from you. People who are "illuminated" are in no way morally better than anyone else - it is complete delusion to think so - and one of the hardest aspects of his training is for the pupil to realise that his teacher has vices and yet still serves the Work. I can't explain why this should be the case yet experience teaches so. It is, of course, the reason for a great deal of cynicism. Furthermore, the illuminated person probably does a full days work like most people, eats, sleeps and visits the bathroom several times a day.

The dimly selfish occultist will probably quite "flummoxed" upon encountering this syndrome. Yes, Reality is still there after the "Big Gee" has zapped you! But now Reality becomes a form of Bhakti Yoga in which you follow your Inner Guidance, practicing devotion and aligning yourself with the Karmic and other fundamental Principles of the Cosmos. You will see every episode of the day as an opportunity for spiritual growth, the unfolding of divine nature, learning from mistakes, guiding others and ultimately trusting totally in Providence with which you now have a deliberate, conscious relationship instead of bumping into it by accident.

A SOLITARY CANDLEMAS RITUAL

BY Bronwyn Starglade

Set your altar as shown in lesson three of the Wicca course. Altar candles for this ritual are pale pink, in honor of youth. If possible, decorate the altar with a pot of crocuses. Florists usually have them by February.

In addition to your usual tools, wine and cakes; have a small sprig of evergreen on the altar (a sprig from the Yule tree or wreath is sufficient.) Be sure that it is small enough to fit in the thurbil and burn safely.

For this ritual, your incense should be a spring scent, perhaps wysteria or lavender. When all is ready, take your ritual bath. Go to your magick area and perform the purification ritual.

Light the watcher candles, the altar candles, and incense. Cast the circle and invoke the Quadrants, offering the elements.

Light your working candle. Hold it to the Goddess and say:

In honor of the quickening light
Found in the lengthening day,
This candle do I burn tonight
for the Goddess and her way.
So Mote It Be!

Hold the incense to the Goddess and say:

The earth comes once again to life,
Crops we plan now for harvest in fall.
I offer this earth to the Sky's wife,
That it be abundant made for all.
So Mote it Be!

Pick up the bowl of water, hold it to the Goddess and say:

The Lady's streams flow once again,
Bestowing life on all the land,
As does her love in the souls of men
Bring them together in heart and hand.
So Mote It Be!

Now take the evergreen twig and light it afire. See the dark of winter burning away, and being replaced by the growing light of coming Spring. Place it in the thurbil where it can burn safely. Then say:

As this symbol of Winter is consumed by the fire,
so is the Darkness consumed by the light.
So Mote it Be!

If you were able to obtain crocuses, now is the time to use them as the subject of a short meditation. If not, concentrate on the mingled scents of evergreen and incense.

Think first about these first flowers of Spring, having hidden under the snows of Winter waiting for the right time to push up and out toward the light. Relate this to your own life -- periods of transformation; as these buds change into blossoms, so does Man change, spiritually and psychically.

When you feel you have finished, bless the cakes and wine. Use the format set out in lesson four (the Solitary Full Moon Ritual). When you have finished, thank and dismiss the Watchers and banish the circle. The Rite is ended.

Wiccan believers want recognition

DARMSTADT, West Germany (AP) — Witches in the U.S. military are banding together in a "Pagan Fellowship" to explain their beliefs and seek dog-tag recognition of their religious preference and time off for holidays.

"Military witches in Europe are trying to take care of the problem of their recognition through proper channels," reported Stars and Stripes, the U.S. military's unofficial daily newspaper. "They are hoping to change the image they feel burdened with and become more widely accepted."

The paper said there were an unknown number of "Wiccan" religion followers among U.S. forces in Europe.

Wiccans, like other pagans, believe in multiple deities as well as the oneness of all with nature, according to Stars and Stripes.

The newspaper interviewed a founder of the Farwander Military Pagan Fellowship, self-proclaimed witch Sgt. Lorie A. Johnson.

Ms. Johnson, a communications specialist with the 601st Tactical Control Wing at Sembach Air Base in West Germany, told the newspaper that the group's goal is to "let military pagans know they're not alone."

The paper, which did not give Ms.

Johnson's hometown, said she and others who share her beliefs "are asking that they be given the same consideration as others."

"They want time off for their religious holidays. They want dog tags that state their religious preference as pagan or 'Wicca.' And they want understanding of their beliefs by military chaplains."

Contrary to what many people think, witches are not in league with evil spirits, the newspaper quoted Ms. Johnson as saying: "We don't make any kind of pacts with any outside forces good or bad."

"People are misinformed about what witches are because during the Middle Ages the church couldn't adapt to us, so it created a myth about us," self-proclaimed practicing Wiccan, Sgt. LaVern Bentz, was quoted as saying.

No hometown was given for Bentz, a military policeman stationed in Frankfurt.

"Neo-pagans encompass the Wiccans, the Druids, the goddess worshipers, the people who worship the Nordic-Celtic pantheons, the ancient Egyptian pantheons and native American beliefs," Ms. Johnson was quoted as telling the paper. "We all share the same basic reverence for nature. That is the common bond."

THE WILLOW
by Arafel

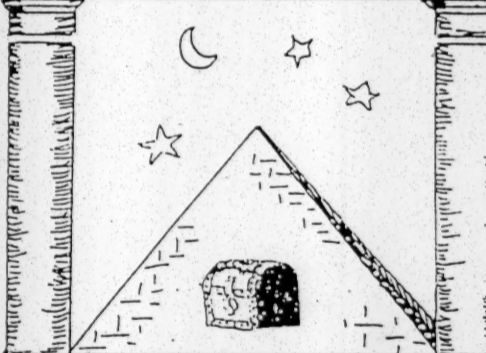

The willow tree has a long association with the Goddess and witches. The Tree of Enchantment and Witches asprin are two of its common folk names. Willow trees and bushes are often found growing near sacred wells. In the orient it is associated with the springtime regeneration of nature, eternal friendship, perseverance, and patience. Even in modern times its first buds signal the arrival of spring. How many of us can remember picking the first pussy willows of the year when all else was still grey and barren.

Willows are easily found as they grow in moist places in most of the U.S., Europe, Central Asia, and North Africa. There are many varieties, such as the pussy willow, black willow, weeping willow, and cork screw willow.

All parts of the willow are usable in the practice of magick. The wood is an excellent choice for magic wands used for healing and moon magick. The wood should be cut on the night of the Full Moon and an offering of wine and honey left for the tree in gratitude for its gift. Willow wood can also be used in talismans when one seeks the protection of the Goddess. Both wood and leaves are used in incense. Mixed with sandalwood and jasmine it is burned on the Full Moon. The bark of the tree contains salicin which is related to aspirin and used by herbalists to alleviate pain and reduce fever. The best time for gathering willow is in early spring.

With its associations with spring and healing, pussy willows are an appropriate plant to decorate altars with as we celebrate Imbolc, the festival of Bridgit, goddess of healing and sacred wells.

GAIN POWER - INSTANTLY

by Cassius

As you read this, you have at your disposal a power that can totally change your life, instantly and permanently. You control a force that can end the negative effects of any problem you now have, improve your relations with others, and put you well on your way to achieving your desires. This power which you hold is nearly ultimate, and you can use it NOW, with a few minutes of thought. Put aside your pre-judgements, and take control of a Force which the world has aspired to throughout history.

The human mind is an incredible tool with staggering potential. It is the most advanced computer in existence, and is also a direct link to the Gods. YOU OWN ONE. Your view of the world, or your Attitude, is the way your mind manifests its power. Your Attitude is the one thing you have complete control over, and when you make the effort to do this, you become invincible to the worlds problems, and unstoppable. A positive Attitude encompasses the feelings of Enthusiasm and Happiness. It is this that makes all great achievement possible.

You can decide right now, to take control of your Attitude, and change your life. Concentrate on the positive side of every situation. Look beyond the mundaneness of daily existence, and see that all you do is really a step forward. If you hold a negative outlook on something, you are turning the power of your mind against you. Worry, anger and sadness not only waste your energy and make you weak, they attract these things to you in the outside world.

If someone has done something to hurt you, their actions only will have effect if you let them, and agree that you have been hurt. If a situation is bad, it certainly WILL be if you allow it to effect your emotions. Holding a positive Attitude allows you to be happy with yourself, and not let the world take you on an emotional roller coaster. How can you hurt a person who is happy in spite of your efforts? How can a person, even in the worst of conditions, be held down if they remain positive, and refuse to be beaten?

You can influence your Attitude through conscious effort. By acting enthusiastic, one becomes enthusiastic - just as one who acts sick will become sick. A positive Attitude generates positive action, and acting in any situation with a positive outlook brings you closer to success.

CAULDRONS BUBBLE UP WITCH OF THE PREDICTIONS WILL BE TRUE

The witches are out with their annual Halloween predictions for the coming year and they say Col. Oliver North will start a string of franchise military summer camps and Michael Jackson will try to adopt Jim and Tammy Bakker.

For the 14th year, the off-the-wall forecasts were offered yesterday by the New York Center for the Strange, which claims to be in contact with most of the legitimate witches in the country - 320 at its latest count.

For example, the witches predict that George Bush's campaign will falter "when, in attempts at levity, he insults both working mothers and used-car dealers". Fads for 1988 will include primal laughing, sleep marathons and urban bird calling. A fashion designer will introduce a line of lingerie and designer jeans under the "Young Bimbo" label.

The Center for the Strange, a non-profit organization, claims it "impartially explores, investigates and analyzes the sociological, psychological and cultural aspects and implications of prognostication, prophecy, soothsaying, and divination."

The organization's associate research director, Lewis Scott, says witches are harmless and have been getting the dirty end of the stick for centuries. They "seek nothing more than an end to society's villification and hostility and the freedom to practice their beliefs quietly and with dignity," he said.

Scott claims America's leading witches include a prominent TV newscaster, a leading hotel operator, a top Detroit auto executive, several members of Congress and a presidential candidate.
